Nicole says they were at the different stakeholder meetings, seeing common themes: belonging and inclusion, campus and student life, academic and admit support, sustainability, circulation and wayfinding, safety and security, technology, flexibility, and athletics. They are moving into the next stage in development of their Facility Master Plan. They are doing a survey for students on what they envision for the campus and the big idea for how the campus can grow and change. They are looking at the external and internal parts of the campus, considering the opportunity zones, open space, pedestrian circulation, and program. Carlos said next week we will have a College Assembly about the Facility Master Plan, where people will get to see more into the conditions of the existing spaces, and additional analysis into the restraints or what we think we can do, as well as feedback from students and the results of the survey.
9		J. Boyle, Dave Belman	1:45	Information Dave Belman is here to talk about an effort that Student Life and Basic Needs is discussing: the opioid overdose epidemic. He brought a procedure to the Shared Governance Council, who then said to share it with each of the senates and get feedback. The Opioid Overdose Epidemic is a huge national issue – there is a wave in deaths that started in the 1990s, and the dramatic rise has happened in the last 10 years with synthetic drugs like fentanyl. 				Services has done incredible work cutting the number of prescriptions that doctors were writing – the number has been cut in half. Even then, the rates of deaths are still going up, especially in the last 3 to 4 years. People anywhere from 20 to 50 have died the most. There is a California Standing order that allows community organizations and other entities, including colleges, to distribute naloxone (most commonly a nasal spray that reverses an opioid overdose within minutes) to persons at risk of an opioid-related overdose. There are a lot of protections for folks who give Naloxone, like the Good Samaritan Law. The proposed procedure is to train folks in the LMC community to distribute naloxone, and they will be going over how to do so. The Naloxone Distribution Project (NDP) is administered by the state, the Department of Health Care Services (DHCS) and provision of free naloxone. LMC is partnering with Contra Costa Health Services (CCHS) to offer education, etc. There will be a locked place to store the Naloxone, training, and reporting the number of doses of Naloxone distribution (which is required). The next steps are to start scheduling training, ordering Naloxone, and so on. The very next step is to go to each Senate, as mentioned earlier, and take the feedback to SGC. The SGC will then hopefully support the procedure and get the plan started.
